

RALSTON NAMED FOR GOVERNOR

Nominated By Acclamation Today
By The Democratic Convention at Indianapolis.

HONAN AGAIN ON THE TICKET

Convention Voting For Other Candidates This Afternoon—Shea
Is Expected to Win.

The Democratic state convention was held in Tomlinson hall, Indianapolis, today. It opened at 9:30 o'clock.

Governor Marshall was temporary chairman and delivered the keynote address. It was removed Wednesday night that following his address Gov. Marshall would announce retirement from the race for president on account of election of Crawford Fairbanks, Joe Bell and other representatives of the brewery interests as district delegates to the national convention. The governor declined to discuss the report but his friends said the report was a mistake. The resolutions committee declined to incorporate some of his pet proposals, among them a public utilities commission, in the platform.

THOMAS M. HONAN
Renominated for Attorney-General.

The two senators, Taggart and Maj. Menzies were slated for election as delegates at large today and it was conceded Taggart had the votes to put through all of his favorites in the convention.

Marshall was warmly applauded when he took the platform to speak this forenoon and Taggart was also applauded. The convention took no recess at noon.

Samuel M. Ralston was nominated for governor by acclamation and Ellingham for secretary of state, O'Brien for auditor, Vollmer for treasurer, Greathouse for superintendent, Brolley for statistician, Honan for attorney-general, were named in same way.

Voting for nominations where contests existed was then begun and is in progress this afternoon.

The selection of appellate court judge is last on the list. The talk of Wray and Downey as candidates continued last night and this morning, but it is expected that Shea will win this afternoon.

At 3:30 o'clock this afternoon the convention was still voting on lieutenant-governor, there being five candidates. At the end of the third ballot O'Neal of Mishawaka was in the lead.

CONVICTED OF MURDER

Willis Brown Is Already Working For a Pardon.

Willis Brown, who confessed the murder of Mrs. Virgil Jackson and Jack Alden at Tacoma, Wash., is already trying to get a pardon. Tacoma papers say that Mrs. Jackson, who left her husband at Brownstown and eloped with Brown, had been disappointed because Brown had not given her the easy life he promised and contemplated leaving him. It was also said the couple talked of coming back to Indiana. The Tacoma News in a lengthy article says:

"Willis Brown, who confessed to the murder of his wife and her companion, Jack Wilson or Alden, was sentenced to serve ten to fifteen years in the state penitentiary.

Brown's aspect when brought into court was that of a weary, broken-down old man. Asked by Judge Chapman if he had any reason to give why sentence should not be passed on him Brown, in a voice that could be heard only a few feet away, replied that he did not know of any.

In passing sentence Judge Chapman said he recognized the fact that Brown had been subjected to great provocation, but even that could not be allowable as an excuse for taking human life.

In view of all the circumstances Judge Chapman imposed the minimum sentence for murder in the second degree.

Immediately after Brown was taken back to the jail he was visited by H. H. Fatland, former state senator and manager of the Keystone Lumber company, where Brown worked. After talking with the prisoner Mr. Fatland announced that he will at once place the case before Governor Hay and endeavor to have Brown pardoned or released on parole. In the meantime Mr. Fatland has taken charge of Brown's affairs and will dispose of the personal property for him. The two children, Mr. Fatland says, will be placed in the Children's Industrial home until some other arrangements can be made. Both children have expressed a desire to go to their maternal grandmother in the east.

Brown took his sentence calmly and expects that the efforts of his friend, H. H. Fatland, will result in his release. Before being taken to the court room for sentence he told a News reporter that he did not believe he would be kept in jail long.

"Of course they will let me out; what else could they do?" he said. "Nobody who knows all the facts would want to keep me locked up very long. Things got so bad that I was driven to do what I did."

Asked if he intended to kill his wife and Wilson when he started for the car Sunday night, Brown replied:

"I didn't think about killing anybody. I started for the car and on the way I picked up the piece of scantling. When I saw those two get off the car and walk away together, leaving 'em alone, I got so mad I didn't hardly know what I was doing. I know I hit them both and killed them."

RECEIVER'S
SALE OF LINE

Indianapolis & Louisville Traction Company Property Was Sold at Scottsburg.

ONLY ONE BID WAS SUBMITTED

The Road Was Sold to Representative of First Mortgage Bond Holders.

At Scottsburg at 10 o'clock this morning the Indianapolis & Louisville Traction Company line was sold at receiver's sale to James C. Chapman, of Pittsburg, representing the first mortgage bondholders. He was the only bidder and his bid was $750,000 which was the amount which had been fixed by the court as the minimum amount which would be accepted.

The sale was conducted by Edward C. Daniels of Indianapolis, master in chancery.

At the sale were several capitalists including Jerome Hill Jr., of Pittsburg, president of the old company and M. G. Eyster, assistant secretary of the Colonial Trust Company of Pittsburg, one of the heavy bondholders.

It had been expected that the bondholders would be the only bidders and would get the line.

The sale will have to be approved by the federal court before the purchasers take possession and until then the receiver, J. E. Greeley will continue in charge.

What changes, if any, will be made by the new owners have not yet been announced, but the statement was made public today that the line will be operated under the name of the Indianapolis & Louisville Electric Railway Company.

The same interests which have acquired the property by the receiver's sale operated the road for a number of years preceding the receivership.

crats.—Other Selections.

Pansy Luncheon.

The Kaffee Klatch gave a pansy luncheon Wednesday afternoon in honor of Mrs. John Gephart, a member of the club, who left today for New York to join her husband for residence there.

The party was a surprise and was given at the home of Mrs. H. S. Dell on north Walnut street. The pansy figured in all of the appointments for the luncheon as an especial compliment to the guest of honor whose given name is the same as the flower. The napkins bore a pansy design and it figured in the place cards, the candle shades and the general decorations.

Plates were laid for fifteen and after the luncheon Mrs. Gephart was presented with a silver spoon and presents from the guests as individuals. The gifts were concealed at different places in the house and on the wrapper of each was a unique direction which gave a hint as to the place of concealment of another gift.

Entertained For Daughter.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Shepard on West Fourth street was the scene of a brilliant reception Wednesday afternoon, when Mrs. Shepard entertained a large company of friends with a china shower in honor of her daughter, Mrs. H. W. Greeman, a bride of the month. The shower was planned as a surprise for the honor guest, and was complete in every way. The afternoon was pleasantly spent with games and music. An elegant two course luncheon of sandwiches, pickles, coffee, ice cream and cake were served. Mrs. Greeman was the recipient of a number of choice pieces of fine haviland and hand painted china. The hostess was assisted informally during the afternoon by Mrs. A. B. Shotts and Mrs. Walter Johnson. The only out of town guests were Mrs. J. H. Rider, of Crothersville, with Mrs. H. L. Bridges, and Mrs. Oakley Allen of Brownstown with Mrs. Johnson. Mrs. Shepard possesses the quality of making her guests feel perfectly at home, and on all occasions proves herself an ideal hostess.

The Smart Set.

Ranking easily as the best up to date attraction of the season, "The Smart Set" Company with its collection of colored stars, there is every indication that this sterling troupe of fun-makers, vocalists and singers will have a profitable engagement when it comes to the Majestic Theatre for one night, Friday, March 22. The company will present "The Mayor of New Town," a rip-roaring and side-splitting musical comedy in three acts. Homer Tutt and Ethel Marshall he will have the support of forty capable people. The scenic equipment is said to be first-class in every respect. Many novel vaudeville features and surprises are also promised. Seats now on sale.

MEDICINE CASE IS RECOVERED

Supposed To Have Been Stolen
From Dr. Luckey By Bank
Swindler

NOW IN THE COLUMBUS JAIL

Case Was Found Under Trestle On Southeastern West of the City.

The medicine case or grip which was stolen from Dr. Luckey's office some time ago was returned to him Wednesday evening.

Sunday afternoon while two young colored men were walking along the Southeastern they found the grip under a trestle on the road west of the Stanfield-Carlson mill. The contents had not been removed but the case had been ruined for use by mice which had gnawed the leather badly in several places. In looking through the case the young men found some prescription blanks bearing Dr. Luckey's name and this led to the return of the property to the owner. Dr. Luckey will keep the case as a souvenir of a little experience which has gained considerable notoriety.

Some time ago a man appeared at the physician's call and gave him a false call to east Second street and while he was gone the man returned and stole the case. About this time a man appeared at the First National Bank and cashed a certificate of deposit issued by a Columbus bank and on which Dr. Luckey's name had been forged as an indorsement. The certificate had been secured at Columbus through a forgery. Later a man was arrested at Peru charged with wholesale bank swindling in the state and was taken to Columbus to await the trial on the charge of swindling the banks there. He has been in jail there awaiting trial. Seymour bankers and Dr. Luckey went to Columbus and the former identified him positively as the man who cashed the certificate here and Dr. Luckey identified him as the man who visited his office.

It is supposed that the man after his operations left town and while loafing along the Southeastern concluded he could not use the medicine case and placed it under the trestle.

ANOTHER EFFORT

To Secure Freedom Made By William Pope.

William Pope, formerly of Seymour can't get over the idea that it would be a nice thing to get out of the Columbus jail.

The Republican of that city says: "William Pope, who is serving a 250-day sentence in the county jail for contributing to child delinquency, is reported sick, and he sent word this morning to Mayor Barnaby, who sentenced him, to call and see him, but the mayor said he had no license to practice medicine and he did not go, as he could not relieve his sufferings or release him from jail. The mayor believes that the latter is more desired by the prisoner than the former, as he has made several unsuccessful efforts to effect his release.

In some of these efforts the prisoner is believed to have resorted to subterfuges, the most recent of which was a rather remarkable one. The prisoner showed to the local officers a letter which he received from Cincinnati, and in which the writer insisted that he was guilty of the crime for which Pope is doing time. He expressed deep gratitude to the prisoner for taking the crime on himself and thus making a noble sacrifice for the writer. The writer also said that he hoped to be able some time to repay him for his great kindness and the sacrifice he is making, but that just at present he is on the way to join the regular army. The writer did not sign his full name to the letter but only his initials or the initials of some one else, and the officers are inclined to regard the letter as a hoax. At any rate it has not had the effect of bringing about the prisoner's release, nor will it do so."

Heart to Heart
Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

BOYS WILL BE BOYS.

Little Sammy Elster of New York ran away from home. A search was made, the newspapers printed the story, and the mother wept for her boy.

Which is nothing new. But in Sammy's case there was a reason. He wanted his hair cut like pa's.

His mother forced him to wear long hair and dressed him in Little Lord Fauntleroy style. Not being that sort of boy, he revolted and ran away.

He turned up in a day or two minus the curls.

His mother knows more now.

There are many ways by which you can make miserable the life of a real boy.

One of them, which is to treat him as if he were a baby, is the refinement of cruelty.

To dress up a manly little fellow in a manner markedly different from that of his fellows and turn him loose among them is to subject the poor boy to a merciless lot of critics.

He becomes a target.

Other boys ask no better fun than to jibe at him in the street vernacular; call him a "sissy boy," pull the curls, blacken his eyes and rub his nose in the dust.

Fool kid.

It is hard enough for a youngster in the republic of Boyville to adapt himself to the democratic treatment accorded its citizens without suffering the handicap put upon him by the fad of a fond and foolish mother.

And the boy who willingly submits to be fussed-over and made to pose as a sprig of aristocracy probably has something the matter with him.

Better see the doctor.

If he submits unwillingly and has in him the making of a man better take him down to the corner and leave him there in the midst of a few active hustlers of his own size and age.

He may come back whipped and crying, but demanding that he be dressed like other boys. Put plain togs on him and turn him loose again.

He may come back whipped, but not crying, or he may come back disgraced, but victor. Anyway—

Boys will be boys, not babies.

When Sammy protests his hair ought to be cut short better send him to the barber shop.

ENGLISH SPEECH FOR CHINA.

As nobody knows even approximately the number of inhabitants in the vast Chinese domain, so, perhaps, nobody can say definitely and positively how many distinct dialects are spoken by the peoples of the different provinces. A recent authority puts the number at "over a hundred." So widely differing in many respects are many of these dialects that they constitute practically distinct languages. To endeavor to group, combine and standardize these languages into one common speech for the whole empire would be a work of many years and of immense difficulties. In fact, it would seem to be an undertaking involving greater difficulties than the introduction of a complete new tongue. And it must be remembered that the official and educated classes are familiar already with English. The language is taught in the universities and many of the schools. It is the common medium of official communication with other governments. At the same time, the leaders of the new movement are enthusiastic friends of our country. If the republican movement shall succeed, that success may be followed by the transformation of the Chinese into an English-speaking people.

How much of a man's income should be spent for rent? Benjamin C. Marsh, of New York, executive secretary of the committee on congestion of population, told the Citizenship Class of the South Congregational church of this city that no wage-earner should pay more than 20 per cent. of his income for rent, says the Boston Globe. This is cutting the scale down, as there is a saying that one-fourth of the income can be wisely devoted to rent. Perhaps conditions are changing and Mr. Marsh is right. One-fifth of the income certainly leaves a larger margin to be devoted to the purchase of food, clothing and other necessities and gives a little chance to save. But it is not always possible to find suitable accommodations with a fifth of the income, nor with a fourth for that matter. Rent is not a luxury, but a fixed charge, and it is not always what a man wants to pay or can afford to pay, but what conditions compel him to pay.

Rochester (N. H.) Courier: The Boston Globe has a timely editorial on the deficiency of modern school pupils in spelling, and suggests that the old-time spelling matches might be revived with good result. Any person who cannot spell fairly well and read aloud with good effect comes pretty near being illiterate, says the Globe. Amen, and a loud one! Give the school pupil a thorough drill in reading, spelling, writing, arithmetic, geography and such fundamentals and let him learn the fold-er-rols afterwards, if he wants to.

That collision between a steamship in the merchant service and a United States armored cruiser in the harbor of Honolulu, in which the cruiser was so badly damaged as to necessitate immediate retirement for repairs, while the merchant ship steamed off apparently uninjured, might be cited as illustrating Kipling's assertion to the effect that the "weaker vessel" is the deadlier of the two.

Prof. Worthington told a London audience that in order to obtain pictures of what happened when a drop of water fell into a vessel containing water he had taken photographs by an electric spark of the duration of three-millionths of a second. Some day, perhaps, Prof. Worthington will be able to take a photograph of the drug store soda-fountain wink.

A young man in Newark killed himself because of despondency. He had been promoted and was afraid he would not be able to keep up to the work. This kind of suicide is most unusual, and will have few imitators. The average American young man is not afflicted with such fatal modesty.

A Kansas dentist is reported to have discovered how to cause new teeth to grow in the jaws of people who have lost the ones with which nature furnished them. Let those who have swallowed their false teeth hope on.

"No man has the right to marry on $4 a week," says a Kansas judge. This blasts the hopes of some of the devoted army of lady boarding house keepers.

A German aeronaut says he thinks a transatlantic flight possible. There is no danger in thinking so provided he confines himself to thinking.

Complaint is raised because the doctors sometimes remove the appendix unnecessarily, but nobody has yet demanded that they "put it back."

Doctors Use This for Eczema

Dr. Evans, Ex-Commissioner of Health, says: "There is almost no relation between skin diseases and the blood." The skin must be cured through the skin. The germs must be washed out, and so have long ago been found worthless. The most advanced physicians of this country are now agreed on this, and are prescribing a treatment for eczema, thymol and other ingredients for eczema and all other skin diseases. It is compound is known as D.D.D. Prescription for Eczema.

Dr. Holmes, the well known skin specialist writes: "I am convinced that the D.D.D. Prescription is as much a specific for eczema as quinine for malaria. We have been prescribing the D.D.D. remedy for years."

We ourselves vouch for the D.D.D.

GATHERED IN PASSING

Poverty never needs any pushing to keep rolling along.

A price tag gets pinned to about everything, including mercy.

The devil puts folk on their honor so as to be sure to get them.

A big head is always so light the frailest shoulders can carry it.

With most of them waste makes them want to do it some more.

If a man borrows from another who dies he thinks the debt is paid.

A man who appreciates himself hardly ever can see anybody else.

A girl never gets to know more than a man until she marries him.

Being a smart aleck can get a person into more trouble than being a dunce.

The way a woman keeps free from seasickness is to stay in her cabin and hide from others.

If there were any way of knowing what a girl means by what she says she wouldn't say it.

A girl never takes as long to make up her mind to marry a man as she does to make up his.

When a man talks he can hear only himself; but a woman can talk and hear everybody else in the room.

One of the mysteries of life is why a man can be so much prouder of liking corned beef and cabbage than of being a good example.—New York Press.

TEN LAWS OF HEREDITY.

1. The child tends to inherit every attribute of parents.

2. Contradictory attributes cannot be inherited from both parents.

3. The child may inherit the attributes of either parent solely.

4. It may inherit the qualities of one parent in some respects and of the other in other respects.

5. It may inherit the father's attributes for one period of existence, and of the mother's for another.

6. Some attributes have the quality of prepotency, or the tendency to push aside or overrule other attributes.

7. Attributes which are similar in both parents tend to become prepotent, giving rise to convergent or cumulative heredity.

8. Attributes may be transmitted in latent form from one generation to another, to another in a third or fourth, or still more remote generation—a phenomenon termed reversion.

9. Attributes tend to appear in the progeny about the same time of life in which they became manifest in the parents.

10. Attributes of the father tend to be inherited by the sons, and of the mother by the daughters.

BOOK RULES.

Good books are treasures and they should be handled with the greatest of care by everyone. Here are a few rules that should be observed:—

Never drop a book upon the floor.

Never turn leaves with the thumb.

Never lean or rest upon an open book.

Never turn down the corners of leaves.

Never touch a book with soiled or damp hands.

Always place a large book upon a table before opening it.

Never pull a book from the shelf by the binding at the top, but by the back.

Never close a book with a pencil, tablet, or anything else that is bulky between the leaves.

AGAINST TRESPASSING

Pennsylvania Road's Campaign To Be Vigorous This Year.

J. T. Jones, the local agent of the Pennsylvania road, has received a bulletin issued by the road and relating to the dangers of trespassing on railroad property. The bulletin shows that during the past twelve years trespassing on the Pennsylvania railroad system's property in violation of law has caused the death of 8,523 people and the injury of 8,285 others.

In 1907 the company began a vigorous campaign to educate the people to the dangers of trespassing and the co-operation of the county and city officials and press was sought in the work. As a result of the management's efforts the number of trespassers killed and injured on the system has decreased 42 per cent since the movement began five years ago. The company is preparing to wage the most vigorous campaign this year that has yet been made. The tracks will be reposted, the enactment of more stringent laws will be asked, and every officer and employee of the road will be asked to lend assistance to decrease still further the number of deaths and injuries on the lines from trespassing.

HELPFUL HINTS.

Food experts tell us that uncooked sour kraut is a splendid broom for the alimentary canal, as it chases away the decay microbes. Butter milk and sour milk are both valuable as cleansers for the system.

When roses or other cut flowers are to be kept an excellent way is to put the stems into cold water in a deep bedroom pitcher, wrap the stems and flowers with dampened newspaper. Keeping the air from the flowers is the real secret and having them damp and cool.

To Renovate Oilcloth.—Dissolve carefully, as it is highly inflammable, one and a fourth ounces of paraffine in a pint of turpentine by gentle heat. Apply while warm with a flannel to oilcloth or linoleum. Let it remain twenty-four hours and then polish with a flannel. Use this preparation spring and fall and double the life of the floor covering.

Kerosene put on with a flannel cloth is an excellent cleanser for oilcloth.

In cooking vegetables of all kinds, a wire frying basket is a great convenience, as the vegetables may be removed quickly and dried out, or if the water does not boil away they have a little time before scorching to be discovered.

A pair of sheet iron baking sheets are a boon to the busy housewife. Have the sides bent, making a very shallow pan and making a place to take hold of in handling. If the sheets are made the size of the oven, a whole row of cookies may be baked with one oven heat. This is an important item when using gas.

THE RECORDS

Of Young Men To Be Kept By Girls' Mothers.

Out at Catlin, Ill., a card index system is to be used on the young men of that section which is similar to the one political managers use. A young man who can't show a clear bill of character will have a slim chance to hold down parlor chairs in that section for any length of time.

The mothers of Catlin, with a view to protecting their daughters through investigation of the standing and character of their suitors, have formed a Mothers' Protective Association and plan to extend it to other cities of Central Illinois.

With an inter-city association the mothers of one city can get information from one another concerning any young man who may come courting from a distance.

Here are the points which the mothers will ask to be enlightened upon when a suitor appears:

Does he smoke cigarettes?

Does he drink?

Is he known to be profane or vulgar?

Does he read good books?

Does he go to church or Sunday school?

Does he spend his evenings at his home or in the saloons?

Is he considerate of his mothers and sisters?

What are his business prospects?

In addition there are a number of blanks in the form to be filled in with additional information not covered by these questions.

An Epitaph Ad.

There is a Philadelphia man who is an authority on epitaphs, serious and otherwise—"otherwise," for, as every one knows, many are unconsciously funny. "But," says the Philadelphian, "it is not often that one encounters an epitaph that is meant to carry a business advertisement. Such a one, however, exists in an Ohio cemetery. It was the happy idea of the widow of a man named McConnell, a partner in an industrial concern known as McConnell & McCumber.

"It appears that, not long after the decease of her husband, Mrs. McConnell married Mr. McCumber, her late husband's business associate.

"The epitaph is as follows: 'Sacred to the memory of Michael McConnell, for twenty years the senior partner of the firm of McConnell & McCumber, now McCumber & Company.'"

NEW ERA IN THE STEEL INDUSTRY

Is Presaged By This Remarkable Discovery.

VAST NEW IRON ORE FIELD

Deposit of the Highest Grade Ore Estimated at More Than a Billion Tons Has Been Uncovered Almost at the Door of the Largest Steel and Iron Industries in the World—The Mother Lode Discovered.

Pittsburg, March 21.—Conservatively estimated at more than one billion tons, an immense deposit of highest grade iron ore has been located in the heart of Pennsylvania. The mother lode of red hematite ore which scientists for many years have believed lay somewhere in southern Pennsylvania has been located almost at the door of the largest steel and iron industry in the world. It is claimed by geologists and engineers who have made investigation that it is the most startling discovery since the discovery of gold in 1849, and is destined to mark a new era in the steel and iron industry of this country. It is located in Ayr township, Fulton county, in three spurs of the Blue Ridge mountains known as Meadow Ground mountains, Lowry's Knob and Dickie mountain, 100 miles from Baltimore, 200 miles from Philadelphia and 240 miles by rail from Pittsburg. The most remarkable thing about it is the fact that there are three kinds of ore—red hematite estimated at more than 250,000,000 tons; brown hematite in about the same quantity, and carbonate of iron to the extent of more than half a billion tons.

TOOK IT SERIOUSLY

Mrs. Carson Kills Herself Following Smuggling Accusation.

New York, March 21.—Mrs. Blanche M. Carson of San Francisco, who had been detected by the customs inspectors in an attempt to smuggle $20,000 worth of pearls and other gems into the country, looped a fifteen-foot trunk rope about her throat, tied the other end to the steam radiator in her room on the eighth floor of the Hotel Brozelli, and leaped through the window out into the dark.

On the table in her room was a copy of "Science and Health." Mrs. Carson was an adherent of the Christian Science faith—and the pages of this textbook of the cult were much thumbed. In the chapter headed "Footsteps of Truth" was this paragraph, written by the dead leader of the Christian Science church:

"The so-called sinner is a suicide. Sin kills the sinner and will continue to kill him as long as he sins."

In the margin by the side of these printed words was a heavy pencil mark. In a letter to her brother, Paul R. Marbury, a banker of Los Angeles, Mrs. Carson wrote:

"I could not stand the disgrace of my arrest. I had to work out my own salvation, and I knew of no other course. Please forget about it."

STILL AT LARGE

The Allen Gang Continues to Give the Officers the Slip.

Mount Airy, N. C., March 21.—Reports have reached here to the effect that two men, thought to be Fred Allen and Wesley Edwards, members of the Allen gang, had been seen walking along the tracks of the Southern railway, eight miles southeast of here, heading for Pilot mountain, fifteen miles away.

As soon as the report was received a posse was organized to pursue the men. Pilot mountain is a station on the Southern railroad on the border of Curry and Stokes counties.

Two boys, fifteen years old, visited several stores in the city and purchased bread and a quantity of canned goods. The officers were notified and pursued the youngsters, who had gone in the direction of the mountains, but were unable to overtake them. It is certain that these boys are doing the foraging for the fugitives.

SOFT COAL MINES TO BE CLOSED APRIL 1

"Only a Miracle Can Prevent It," Says White.

Cleveland, O., March 21.—In the threatened strike of 300,000 bituminous coal miners in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana and Illinois, whose representatives deadlocked yesterday with mine operators here, peace seems nearer today. Although neither miners nor operators would give an inch in their conference, there is a manifest desire on both sides to settle fairly if possible and avert a strike in the bituminous fields of the country.

Whether a settlement is made or not, President John P. White of the United Mine Workers said there would be a suspension of work April 1 in soft coal mines in Ohio, Indiana, western Pennsylvania, central Pennsylvania and other soft coal centers.

"Only a miracle can prevent it," said White. "We cannot expect a miracle."

"If it is necessary to call a national strike, we will tie up the entire country. I have not heard from President Baer of the anthracite operators."

England in Bad Mess.

London, March 21.—The political possibilities which are dependent upon the coal bill overshadow the main question in the lobbies of parliament. Talk of the resignation of the government has become the paramount topic and it is reported that agents of the Liberal party in the country have been hurriedly warned to prepare for a general election. It is stated that if the government resigns the unionists are prepared to take office.

MINE EXPERTS GAVE UP HOPE

No Possible Chance of Rescuing Entombed Men.

THEIR ESCAPE WAS CUT OFF

Explosion in Coal Mine at McCurtain, Okla., Started a Blaze Which Precluded Possibility of Rescue, and Government Crew of Experts Was Compelled to Abandon the Hopeless Task—Seventy-nine Men Doomed.

McCurtain, Okla., March 21.—For the seventy-nine miners who were entombed in mine No. 2 of the San Bois Coal company, located on the west side of McCurtain, all hope has been abandoned. The government mine experts who were summoned to McCurtain from McAlester announce that there is no possible chance to rescue any of the entombed men alive and that they will return to their station at McAlester.

An explosion wrecked the mine, carried away the tipples and damaged the fan-house so badly that it was not until six hours had elapsed that a small quantity of air could be forced into the pit. Eleven men escaped safely from the mine. Ninety men, according to an official bulletin issued by the coal company, had entered the mine for work. The first rescue party crept into the mine half an hour after the explosion. At the bottom of the pit they met eleven men creeping about in the smoke which momentarily became more dense. The rescuers dragged them forth. The men were almost suffocated, and three of them may die.

The entombed miners were working in a remote chamber which has no direct access to the main shaft. Collections of fire damp had been noticed for some days and extra efforts were made to secure ventilation on the part of the operators. It was thought this explosive gas had been cleared out. It is believed that gas came in contact with an open flame carried by one of the miners, which set off the explosion.

TEN HUSBANDS

This Is the Remarkable Score Attributed to This Woman.

Allentown, Pa., March 21.—On a charge that she had married ten husbands and has not been divorced from any, Mrs. Jennie Schwoyer, twenty-seven years old and good looking, the wife of an Allentown ice man, is in jail.

Her first husband, Frank Miller, left her a widow at eighteen. Previous to her becoming the wife of Edward Schwoyer, her present spouse, she had been married to John Gehris of this city, but left him after a year. Her other husbands, she declares, were men of no account, and not worth mentioning. She says Schwoyer's act in prosecuting her is a low-down piece of spite work, because she found it necessary some time ago to have him arrested for non-support. The seven other husbands, so far as Alderman Bower and county detectives have been able to find out, were men named Gowan, Myers, Barber, Williams, Stephens, Henry, Noll and Miller.

THE DOG'S ERROR

Led to the Loss of $5,000 Worth of Revenue Stamps.

Lawrenceburg, Ind., March 21.—A messenger boy employed in the office of the Greendale Distilling company's plant lost a package of government stamps valued at $5,000 while going from the office of the deputy revenue collector to the distillery. The boy was eating a sandwich, and was being followed by a hound, to which a part of his lunch had been given. Suddenly the dog jumped at the boy and caught the package of stamps in its mouth and disappeared in an alley with the boy in pursuit. The police were notified, and, with the office force of the distillery, made a vigorous search, but were unable to find either the stamps or the hound.

KNOX'S VALET

Secretary Will Be Asked to Explain How He Got Him.

Washington, March 21.—Representative Hamlin of Missouri, chairman of the house committee on expenditures in the state department, announced that he had learned that Secretary Knox's valet, who is accompanying the secretary on his South American trip, is a $1,200 employee of the state department mailing room. The Hamlin committee is investigating the case and will summon the secretary to testify on his return.

The Hamlin committee also developed the fact that no one at the state department has any idea at the present time where the money is coming from to defray the expenses of the secretary's South American trip.

MORE EVIDENCE OF A SUGAR MONOPOLY

Government Secures Important Ruling in Court.

New York, March 21.—Tending to show how the American Sugar Refining company for years pursued a policy of buying and closing up refineries, evidence was introduced at the trial of John E. Parsons and the other directors of that company for conspiracy.

Counsel for the accused men made strenuous objection to this line of testimony, one of the grounds being that it would confuse the jury and throw the doors wide open for the admission of testimony that might make the trial last for a long time, but Judge Hand held that the acts of the company in pursuing such a policy had a bearing on the purpose of the alleged conspiracy to close up the Segal refinery, for which the defendants were indicted.

The testimony which District Attorney Wise sought to bring out under this ruling of the court is much the same as that which the government is to produce in the suit for the dissolution of the company now pending. James M. Beck, Richard V. Lindabury and Delancey Nicoll were plainly surprised at the attempt made to use this testimony in the present case and several hours were spent in arguing the matter only to suffer a defeat.

The admissibility of this evidence was brought up when the government called as its witness Charles E. Heike, the former secretary of the company and for many years the right-hand man of H. O. Havemeyer. Mr. Heike, who is over seventy, is at present under sentence for the sugar weighing frauds, but recently got a writ of review from the supreme court. The purpose of calling him was to show how the sugar trust, Mr. Wise said, had from 1891 to 1903, bought twenty-five or thirty refineries in different parts of the country, only to shut their doors, having only four in actual operation, all this being with the design to monopolize.

CAUSED SENSATION

The Maryland Legislature Will Investigate Bribery Charge.

Annapolis, Md., March 21.—Just after the house voted to take up the local option bill last evening, William R. Smallwood, delegate from Prince George county, arose and charged that John F. O'Malley, state auditor and political lieutenant of Senator Gorman, had offered him $2,500 to vote against the bill. O'Malley, Smallwood declared, had informed him he had made a similar offer to D. F. Clendenning of Cecil county and he had accepted. Because of the prominence of the man accused the announcement caused a tremendous sensation. Delegate Cook, Democratic floor leader, and leader of the anti-local option forces, promptly moved the appointment of an investigating committee, which was done. O'Malley declares he does not know Smallwood.

PUT ON PRESSURE

British Government Didn't Want to Hear Inquiry About Reid.

London, March 21.—Sir Henry J. Dalziel, M. P. for Kirkcaldy, has withdrawn the question in the house of commons in regard to the authenticity of the interview with Whitelaw Reid printed by the New York Times, in which the ambassador was quoted as comparing the present condition of Great Britain to that of France before the revolution. It is admitted that pressure has been brought to bear upon Sir Henry to take this action. It is understood that the withdrawal was made at the request of the government.

DEMOCRATS ARE NAMING TICKET

State Convention of the Party at Indianapolis Today

MARSHALL AND KERN SPEAK

Delegates Were Treated to Two Fine Examples of Political Oratory When the State's Chief Executive and the Junior Senator, Temporary and Permanent Chairman, Respectively, Addressed Them.

Indianapolis, March 21.—Tomlinson hall was filled with the delegates, party workers and mere onlookers when Bernard Korbly, chairman of the Indiana state Democratic committee, called the state convention to order today. Following the invocation, Burt New, secretary of the state committee, read the call for the convention, and Chairman Korbly introduced Governor Marshall as the temporary chairman of the convention. The governor's appearance was the signal for a storm of applause, and the state's chief executive entered upon the delivery of his "keynote" speech, cheered by this spontaneous attestation of the esteem in which he is held by his party. The governor spoke for more than an hour, and his address was frequently interrupted by the most enthusiastic applause.

Governor Marshall gave an extensive review of the work of the two legislative sessions during his administration, declaring that in many statutory enactments the party had kept faith with the cause of the people. He touched at considerable length upon the last legislature's proposition looking to the adoption of a new state constitution. The question as to whether the people of this state have a right to vote upon this constitution is now before the courts, he pointed out, and, while saying that he would quietly abide by the decision of the court, if adverse to his views, he would be in favor of calling a special election in order to get rid of the lawyers' amendment which has so long stood in the way of proposing other amendments to the constitution, and would then have the party insist upon further legislative action that would provide a lawful means for presenting these proposed changes to the people for their adoption or rejection. The governor closed by impressing upon the delegates the meaning of "the sacred burden which rests upon your shoulders this day."

Following the report of the committee on credentials and organization, Governor Marshall turned the gavel over to Senator John W. Kern, who had been named permanent chairman of the convention. Senator Kern was given a heart-warming ovation as he advanced to take charge of the convention's deliberations, and he responded in a brief address which evoked the further enthusiastic applause of the delegates. The reading and adoption of the resolutions of the convention, or party "platform," followed and the convention then settled down to the work of naming a ticket. For those offices whose present incumbents had no opposition, the incumbents were renominated by acclamation, as follows:

Secretary of State—Lew G. Ellingham of Decatur.

Auditor of State—William H. O'Brien of Lawrenceburg.

Treasurer of State—William H. Vollmer of Vincennes.

Attorney General—Thomas H. Honan of Seymour.

Superintendent of Public Instruction—Charles A. Greathouse of Indianapolis.

State Statistician—Thomas W. Broley of North Vernon.

At this hour the nomination of Samuel M. Ralston of Lebanon for governor practically is conceded, it being apparent that the greater part of the delegates are for him. An interesting contest is on for the nomination of candidates for lieutenant governor, reporter of the supreme court, and the several judges, and it will be late before the convention concludes its work.

The delegates met last night by congressional districts and selected twenty-six delegates to the Baltimore convention. The delegation will vote as a unit for Governor Marshall for president. There was a strong sentiment in all the delegations for Senator Kern, and it was said that if Bryan would urge it the delegation would drop Marshall at any time and vote for Kern, but the Indiana senator has told his friends that he is not a candidate. The convention today will name four delegates at large to the national convention.

Acquitted on Second Trial.

Michigan City, Ind., March 21.—Calvin Steele of this city, the alleged accomplice of Albert Lane of Indianapolis, in the robbery of John Cottrell, an aged farmer, of $600, last December, was acquitted by a jury of the superior court. This was Steele's second trial. Lane was convicted.

Met Death Beneath Wheels.

Sullivan, Ind., March 21.—Jack Granger, aged nineteen, a driver in the Baldrige mine, near Farmersburg, was kicked from a load of coal by the mule he was driving, and met his death under the wheels of the car.

THREATENS TO MAKE A SENSATIONAL EXIT

Paris Anarchist Causes Consternation in Police Circles.

Paris, March 21.—The police, detectives and magisterial authorities were thrown into a state of consternation over a letter received at the office of Le Journal. The letter purported to be signed by Garnier, the noted anarchist, who is suspected of having shot the bank messenger in the hold-up on the Rue D'Or. It said the writer was sick of the whole affair and had determined to surrender, but that he would do this in his own way. Garnier stated that he intended to visit the offices of either M. Lepine, the prefect of police; M. Bertillon, the fingerprint expert, or some other official, empty two revolvers on the occupants, and then commit suicide with the last bullet. Beside the signature of "Garnier" was a finger print.

Although the letter was at first regarded as a joke, a reporter of the paper took it to M. Bertillon, who after an examination declared the finger print and the handwriting of the letter identical with those possessed by the police, which were known to be Garnier's. As a result of this all officialdom is on tenterhooks awaiting a visit from Garnier, who is known to be capable of carrying out his threat.

Tribute to Beveridge.

The Chicago Post in an editorial paid Beveridge some very high compliments on his speech in that city Tuesday night. The Post said:

"If the Roosevelt forces got a jolt in North Dakota yesterday they got a tremendous boost at the Auditorium last night.

"Never before in Chicago, during a preliminary campaign, where only the question of a candidate for office was discussed was there such an audience as was gathered in the Auditorium last night to hear Senator Beveridge discuss the advisability of nominating Col. Roosevelt for the presidency.

"This gathering of 4,000 people to listen to an address on politics—and that too, when no national platform has been adopted and it is purely a question of what shall go into the platform and who shall become the candidate—was a very great compliment to the former senator from Indiana as well as to the cause he represented.

"Mr. Beveridge is not only a great orator but a great statesman. He is far above the ordinary political speaker, who either indulges in personal innuendoes or tells comic stories in order to hold his audience. He did not stoop to such tricks. He discussed in a logical and forceful way the questions that are uppermost in the minds of the people, to wit: a nonpartisan tariff commission; a repeal of the antiquated Sherman law and in its place a law that will promote business and yet regulate it so that 'big business' may grow but not oppress the people. He then puts forth Col. Roosevelt as a man strong enough and wise enough to lead the Republican party to victory.

"Senator Beveridge had his audience with him from the beginning to the end of his address. Seldom has there been so much of the hearty, old-time enthusiasm in any political meeting here. We congratulate the senator as well as the Roosevelt committee on such an auspicious opening of the Chicago campaign."

Walter Gritton and wife, who have been employed at the interurban station, returned to their home in Lawrenceburg, Ky., last night.

SAVE MONEY

On Two and Half Cents A Day. Letter From W. G. Irwin.

William G. Irwin, who is making a trip up the Nile, in Egypt, writes to Hugh Th. Miller about his experiences and he declares one of the most astounding things he has struck is the rate of wages paid the fellahen (natives) in Egypt. A fellah works all day in the fields, plowing and doing other farm work, and for this service he is paid two and one-half cents a day. More than that, Mr. Irwin says the natives save money from this wage.

Most of the natives who plow in the fields live on onions and raw sugar cane. They live so cheaply, dress so lightly and have so few wants, that they make themselves fairly comfortable on two and a half cents a day and then manage to put aside some for a rainy day. Mr. Irwin's letter here required five cents postage, which was really two days' wages for a native plowman.

Mr. Irwin was much pleased with the rich soil along the Nile and is of the opinion that it has the black corn land of Illinois pushed off the map. Plowing is still as primitive in Egypt as it was a thousand years ago, and in his letter Mr. Irwin tells of seeing plowmen at work using the branch of a tree for a plow, a yoke of oxen being used to pull the rude farming implement.—Columbus Republican.

A World Without A Bible

By Rev. William Evans, Director
Bible Course, Moody Bible
Institute, Chicago

TEXT—When Michajah, the son of Gemariah, the son of Shaphan, had heard out of the book all of the words of the Lord: Take these again another roll, and write in it all the former words that were in the first roll, which Jehoiakim, the king of Judah, hath burned.—Jer. 36:11-23.

Can you picture a world without a Bible? What a poor world it would be. The art of the world has for centuries found its sublimest subjects in the gospel story. A visit to the world's great galleries of art will corroborate this fact. The most beautiful picture in the National Gallery in London is Murillo's "Holy Family;" in Paris, Murillo's "Assumption of the Virgin;" in Antwerp, Reuben's "Descent from the Cross;" in Florence, "The Madonna de la Sedia;" in Venice, Titian's "Assumption of the Virgin;" in Milan, Leonardo's "Last Supper;" in Berlin, Guido's "Ecce Homo;" in Rome, "The Crucifixion," and in Madrid, "The Ascension," by Raphael; in Dresden, the crown of all the world's art, "The Sistine Madonna."

The influence of the Bible is equally felt in the realm of poetry as illustrated in Dante's "Vision;" Tennyson's "Holy Grail;" Browning's "Christmas Eve," "Easter Day," "Death in the Desert;" Whittier's "Our Master."

In the realm of music, the influence of the Bible is seen in such oratorios as "Elijah and Paul" by Mendelssohn; "The Messiah" by Handel; "The Creation" by Haydn. Our National hymn "America," was written by a clergyman.

Literature also has felt the influence of the Bible. In a very real sense Germany may be called the home of the Bible, and Germany is the land of books and learning. It is claimed that over 25,000,000 books left the German press last year. It has been said that Ireland, which in a sense has been deprived of the Bible, is not a land of literature. Indeed, it has been claimed by some that there are towns of moderate size in Ireland in which a book store cannot be found. Ruskin's beautiful gardens would be but barren deserts were it not for the flowers taken from the Bible. Milton's "Paradise Lost" is nothing but the Bible in blank verse. Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress" says practically nothing that the Apostle John had not seen in the Book of Revelation. Shakespeare's works would be very meager if stripped of all their scripture quotations and references. It is claimed that Carlyle is but a spiritual distortion of the Prophet Ezekiel.

When we turn to the realm of morals, the influence of the Bible stands out in even stronger relief. A moral geography of the world could be made by considering the countries that have the Bible and those that do not. What makes Edinburgh better than Constantinople; Toronto better than Paris; Massachusetts better than Mexico? Mexico was colonized a whole century before Massachusetts. Yet look at the moral and intellectual contrast between Massachusetts and Mexico. What better testimony can we have to the influence of the Bible than is found in these comparisons and contrasts? What is the difference between the Pilgrim fathers who came to this country to build up and many of the present emigrants who come to pull down the institutions which are precious to us? Does not the difference lie in this—that those Pilgrims came with the Bible in their hands and the fear of God in their hearts, while a large number of the emigrants of today come with neither of these blessings? Say what we will against the blue laws of Puritanism, they are to be much preferred to the wide open continental Sabbath and the anarchical spirit that too often characterize the emigration of today.

Some figures will be interesting and instructive in this connection. In England, a Bible land, there was 1 murder to every 178,000 inhabitants; in Holland, a Bible land, 1 to every 100,000; in Austria, a land which is half and half Bible, 1 to every 57,000; in Spain, a land of no Bible, 1 to every 4,114; in Naples, a land of no Bible, 1 to every 2,750; and in Rome, the city of no Bible, 1 to every 950.

Further, in speaking of the influence of the Bible in the realm of morals, it is claimed that in London, a Bible city, 4 births out of every 100 were illegitimate; in Paris, where the Bible is seldom read, 48 out of every 100; in Vienna, where there is practically no Bible, for every 100 legitimate births, 113 were illegitimate; and in Rome, where the Bible is practically a forbidden book, for every 100 legitimate births there were 243 illegitimate.

Yet in spite of these facts some men today are trying to get rid of the Bible. Should we not count that man a traitor to his God and to his country who would destroy the Bible?

TEMPERANCE
NOTES

PLAYERS MUST KEEP SOBER

Connie Mack, Manager of Champion Athletics, Says Ball Tossers Cannot Play and Drink.

The following statement by Connie Mack, manager of the American League baseball club of Philadelphia (the "Athletics"), which last season won the largest percentage of games in the American league, is of special interest. It is taken from a personal letter to the secretary of the Scientific Temperance Federation replying to an inquiry as to the customs or requirements concerning drink among baseball players.

"There has been a great change in baseball during the past fifteen years. This has been due in a great measure to the class of men who are now making up baseball teams. In former years, players did not receive very high salaries, and naturally we did not get the class of players whom we are getting today, as the salaries are now very high, and we have in our profession, I might say fully 50 per cent. of college players. The balance of our players, with a very few exceptions, are well-educated men. Alcoholism is practically eliminated from baseball. For instance, I have twenty-five players. Of that number, fifteen don't know the taste of liquors. The few remaining, may, possibly, after a game of ball, take a glass of beer. They do not make a practice of this. Neither do we restrict them from doing so if they desire. They know that we do not approve of their drinking, and the positions that they hold, and the salary that they receive keep them from any such thought as becoming accustomed to drink. I often get into an argument caused by remarks that such and such a player had been seen taking a glass of beer. There is no class of professional men that is watched so closely as the baseball players. If seen taking a drink, a rumor is immediately started that the player was seen drunk last night. This travels very swiftly and is a great injustice to the player, who would not under any circumstances take the second drink. I have had so many arguments that I usually put the matter in this way: Take twenty-five from the baseball profession, and the same number from any bank or brokerage house, and you will find that the percentage using intoxicating liquors is far greater with the latter. I actually believe that in five years from this date at least 90 per cent. of the players will be strictly temperate."—Sunday School Times.

The influence of the Bible is equally felt in the realm of poetry as illustrated in Dante's "Vision;" Tennyson's "Holy Grail;" Browning's "Christmas Eve," "Easter Day," "Death in the Desert;" Whittier's "Our Master."

In the realm of music, the influence of the Bible is seen in such oratorios as "Elijah and Paul" by Mendelssohn; "The Messiah" by Handel; "The Creation" by Haydn. Our National hymn "America," was written by a clergyman.

Literature also has felt the influence of the Bible. In a very real sense Germany may be called the home of the Bible, and Germany is the land of books and learning. Shakespeare's works would be very meager if stripped of all their scripture quotations and references. It is claimed that Carlyle is but a spiritual distortion of the Prophet Ezekiel.

USE OF ALCOHOL DELUSIVE

Instead of Quickening Action of Brain Liquor Has Tendency to Retard It—Few Experiments.

Dr. Kraepelin of the Heidelberg University, has made extensive experiments to determine the effect of alcohol upon brain action. He found that while the simple, automatic actions of the brain, such as reading aloud, were at first quickened by a small dose of alcohol, even these were rendered less trustworthy and accurate. He also found that processes involving no more complex action than adding figures rapidly, or of performing problems in mental arithmetic, were hindered by even small doses of alcohol. The result of these experiments came as a surprise to Dr. Kraepelin himself, who had hitherto shared the popular belief that small doses of alcohol quickened the activity of his mind. But when he came to measure with his unerring instruments the exact time occupied, he found to his astonishment that more time was required to perform these operations than when he did not use alcohol, though it seemed to him that the brain was acting more rapidly. Similar experiments were tried upon others, the same results being gained in every instance. And, singularly enough, each one felt, when under the influence of alcohol, that he was doing better and more rapid work, though the tabulated results showed the reverse to be true. Such is ever the delusive effect of alcohol; and the delusion is as real as in those incidents mentioned at the beginning of this article.

This effect is not peculiar to alcohol. "The ordinary anesthetics used in surgery, as chloroform and ether," says Sir Victor Horsley, "make the patient feel that he possesses great muscular strength, and feels himself to be making powerful efforts, which in reality are not in any way superhuman."

Endurance of Cold.

It is well known that for years past the Hudson Bay company have entirely excluded spirits from the fur countries in the north over which they have control, to the great improvement of the health and morals of their Canadian servants and of the Indian tribes. Mr. Arnold White pointed out a short time back that there is a type of man growing up in the Northwest, provinces of Canada, where almost total abstinence prevails, which for hardihood, health, and powers of endurance has never been equaled.

Eczema Is Spread by Scratching—Intolerable Suffering.

Try This Remedy at Our Risk.

Often an eczema-tortured baby scratches and tears at its itching face until it becomes one mass of sores and the suffering is frightful.

Instead of tying the little one's hands, or, worse, applying a bandage, as some do, merely cover the itching skin with a protecting, soothing application of our new skin remedy, Saxon Salve.

This allays the itching at once, gives the child comfort and allows it to get the needed rest and sleep. More than that, it penetrates the pores of the skin, reaching the very roots of the disease with its germ-destroying, healing power and soon banishes the eruption, leaving the skin smooth and unscarred.

We sell Saxon Salve on a positive guaranty for all sorts of skin diseases. If it does not give satisfaction you get your money back. The Andrews Drug Co., Seymour, Ind.

MOTHERHOOD
SUGGESTIONS

Advice to Expectant Mothers

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

OLD-TIME REMEDY DARKENS THE HAIR

Gives Color, Lustre to Faded and Gray Hair—Dandruff Quickly Removed.

From time immemorial, sage and sulphur have been used for the hair and scalp. Almost everyone knows of the value of such a combination for darkening the hair, for curing dandruff and falling hair, and for making the hair grow.

In olden times the only way to get a hair tonic of this sort was to brew it in the home fireplace, a method which was troublesome and not always satisfactory. Nowadays almost every up-to-date druggist can supply his patrons with a ready-to-use product, skillfully compounded in perfectly equipped laboratories. The Wyeth Chemical Company of New York put up an ideal remedy of this sort, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, and authorize druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

If you have dandruff, or if your hair is turning gray or coming out, don't delay, but get a bottle of this remedy to-day, and see what a few days' treatment will do for you.</

CHAPTER XII.
AN ANSWER.

THE girl made no motion to obey, and the knocking was repeated. Mechanically she moved toward the threshold.

"Yes?" All the color had left her face. "What—what is it?"

"Don't mean to alarm you, my dear, but Mr. Gillett thinks the convict might be concealing himself somewhere in the house; indeed, that it is quite likely. So we are making a little tour of inspection."

"I," she seemed to catch her breath—"it is really quite unnecessary. I have been through them myself."

"Might have known that," with an attempt at jocoseness. "But thought we would make sure. Good night, then." They went.

The man in the room stood motionless now, his face like that of a statue save for the light and life of his eyes. "The other way would have been preferable," he said.

"What were you?" she hesitated, emphasized over sharply the word—"transported for?"

"What does it matter?"

True! What did it matter to her? He had been in prisons before, by his own words.

"Your name, of course, is not John Steele? What was it?"

He looked at her—beyond, to a storm tossed ship, a golden haired child, her curls in disorder, moving with difficulty, yet clinging so steadfastly to a small cage! His name? It may be he heard again the loud pounding and knocking; held her once more to his breast, felt the confiding, soft arms.

"What does it matter?" he repeated.

She spoke mechanically. "When you found yourself recognized, why did you come here—to Strathorn House—incur the danger?"

"Why?" He still continued to look straight before him. "Because you were here?"

"I?" she trembled.

"Oh, you need not fear!" quickly. "You?" A bitter smile crossed his face. "And now?" his voice sounded harsh, tense, and he stepped toward the balcony.

His words, the abrupt action, what it portended, aroused her.

"No, no!" The exclamation broke from her involuntarily. "There—there may be a safer way! Wait!" Bright spots of color now tinted her cheeks. She went quickly toward the door she had left. She listened, turned the key, then, opening the door, stepped hastily out into the hall.

Whatever her purpose, only the desire to act quickly, to have done with an intolerable situation, moved him. Once more he looked toward the window through which he had entered. First, however, before going, he thought himself of something—an answer to one of her questions. She should find the answer after he was gone. His fingers thrust themselves into a breast pocket. He took out a small object wrapped in velvet. An instant his eyes rested upon it; then, stooping, he picked up the bit of lace handkerchief from the floor and, laying the dark velvet against it, placed the two on the table.

Would she understand—the debt he had felt he owed her long before tonight, that sense of obligation to the child who had reached out her hand in a different life, a different world? No. She had of course forgotten. Still, he would leave it, that talisman, so precious, which he had cherished almost superstitiously.

When a few minutes later the girl hastily re-entered the room she carried on her arm a man's coat and hat. Her appearance was feverish, her eyes wide and shining.

"Your clothes are torn—would attract attention! These were on the rack. I don't know whose, but I stole them—stole them!"

She spoke quickly, with a little, hard note of self mockery. Her voice broke suddenly. She looked about her. The coat and hat slipped from her arm. She looked at the window. The curtain still moved as if a hand had but recently touched it. She stared at it incredulously. He had gone. He would have none of her assistance then; preferred—She listened, but caught only the rustling of the heavy silk.

She became aware of a throbbing in her head, a dull pain, and, mechanically seating herself near one of the tables, she put up her hand and started to draw the pins from her hair, but soon desisted. Again she began to think, more clearly this time, more poignantly, of all she had experienced, listened to, that night.

She, a Wray, sprung from a long line of proud, illustrious folk! And he? The breath of the roses outside was wafted upward. Her eyes, deep, self scoffing, rested without seeing on a small dark object on a handkerchief on the table. What was it to her if they took him—what, indeed? Her fingers played with the object, closed hard on it. Why should she care if he paid the penalty—he, a self confessed—

Something fell from the velvet covering in her hand. She was vaguely aware of it gleaming there on the cold white marble, a small disk—a gold coin. Then slowly she took it as if asking herself how it came there on her handkerchief, which, she dimly remembered, had been lying on the floor. Some one, of course, must have picked up the handkerchief, but no one had been in the room since she had noticed it except—

More closely she scrutinized it, the shining disk on her rosy palm. A King George gold piece! Above the monarch's face and head with its flowing locks appeared a tiny hole, as if some one had once worn it. Beneath, just discernible, was the date, 1762. She continued to regard it, then looked again at the bit of velvet near by. It had been wrapped in that carefully—for what reason. Like something more than what it seemed—a mere gold piece.

"1762." Why, even as she gazed at the cloth, felt it, did the figures seem to reiterate themselves in her brain?

"1762." There could be nothing especially significant about the date. Yet even as she concluded thus by some introspective process she saw herself bending over, studying those figures on another occasion. Herself, and yet—

She was looking straight before her now. Suddenly she started and sprang up. "A King George gold piece!" Her hair, unbound, fell around her, below her waist. Her eyes, like sapphires, gazed out from a veritable shimmer of gold. "Date!" She paused. "Why, this belonged to me once as a child, and I!"

The blue eyes seemed searching—searching. Abruptly she found what she sought. "I gave it to the convict on the Lord Nelson." She almost whispered the words. "The brave, brave fellow who sacrificed his life for mine." Her warm fingers closed softly on the coin. She seemed wrapped in the picture thus recalled.

"Then how?" Her brows knitted; she swept the shining hair from her face. "If he were drowned, how could it have been left here by?" Her eyes were dark now with excitement. "Him? Him?" she repeated. "Unless," her breast suddenly heaved, "he was not drowned, after all. He!"

A sudden shot from the park rang out. The coin fell from the girl's hand. Other shots followed. She ran out upon the balcony, a stifled cry on her lips. She stared off, but only the darkness met her gaze.

Not far from one of the entrances to Regent's park or the hum of Camden Town's main artery of traffic lay a little winding street, which because of its curving lines had long been known as Spiral row. Into this byway there turned late in the night of the second day after that memorable evening at Strathorn House a man who, looking quickly around him, paused before the closed gate of one of the dwellings. After a moment's hesitation the man pulled the bell, waited for some time, but no response came. When from the end of the street he heard a vehicle coming rapidly toward him he more firmly jerked at the handle of the bell. This time his efforts were successful. A glimmer as from a candle appeared at the front door, and a few minutes later a dark form came slowly down the graveled walk.

"Good evening, Dennis," said the caller. The faint gleam of the candle revealed the drowsy and unmistakably Celtic face of him he addressed, a man past middle age, who regarded the newcomer with a look of recognition. "I'm afraid I've interrupted your slumbers. This is rather a late hour at which to arrive."

"No matter, sir. Sure and I sat up expecting you, Mr. Steele, until after midnight and had only just turned in when?"

"What?" The newcomer, now fairly within the garden, could not suppress a start of surprise, which, however, the other, engaged in relocking the gate, did not appear to notice. "Expecting?"

"Although I'd given up thinking you'd be here tonight," the latter went on. "But won't you be stepping in, sir?"

The other silently followed, walking in the manner of one tired and worn. "My master did not come back with you, sir, from Strathorn House?"

"No; Captain Forsythe's gone on to Germany."

The servant's glance rested now in some surprise on the newcomer's garments—a gamekeeper's well worn coat and cap—and on the dusty, almost shabby looking shoes.

"A wager," said John Steele, noting the old orderly's expression. "From Strathorn House to London by foot within a given time, don't you know. Fell in with some rough customers last night who thought my coat and hat better than these."

"I beg your pardon, sir, but"—The man's apprehensive look fastened itself on a dark stain on the coat near the shoulder.

"Just winged me—a scratch," replied John Steele, with an indifferent shrug, sinking into a chair near the fire, which burned low.

"One moment, Dennis." John Steele leaned back. The dying embers revealed a haggard face. His eyes half closed as if from lack of sleep, but immediately opened again. "You spoke of expecting me. How," he said, stretching out his legs, "did you know?"

"Sure, sir, by your luggage." It arrived with my master's heavier boxes that he didn't take along with him over the water."

His luggage there—where no one knew—could have known—he was going! The place he had selected under what he had considered propitious circumstances as a haven, a refuge, where he might find himself for a brief period comparatively safe, could he reach it, turn in without being detected? This last he believed he had successfully accomplished, and then to be told by the man—All John Steele's excuses for coming in this unceremonious fashion that he had planned to put to the servant of Captain Forsythe were at the moment forgotten. Who could have guessed that he would make his way straight hither—or had any one? An enemy, divining a lurking place for which he was heading, would not have obligingly forwarded considering the servant's assumption of his purpose in coming hither. He might as well let the fellow think.

No one must know where he was under any circumstances. His voice sounded almost jocular, at singular variance with the heaviness, the weariness of his face. He, the old servant had been a soldier, knew how to fill, then, a request or an order. Something crinkled in the speaker's hand, passed to the other, who was now busying himself with the bath. The man's moist fingers did not hesitate to close on the note.

Half an hour later John Steele, clad in his dressing gown, sat alone near the fire in his room. Every sound had ceased save at intervals a low creaking of old timber.

John Steele smiled grimly, but soon his thoughts seemed floating off beyond control, and, rising suddenly, he threw himself on the bed.

The afternoon was well advanced when, as half through a dream, John Steele heard the rude jangling of a bell. The loud and emphatic closing of the front gate served yet more speedily to arouse him. Hastily he sat up. His head buzzed from a long needed sleep that had been oversound. "So it's the meter man you are?" John Steele recognized the inquiring voice as that of the caretaker. "Sure, you're a new one from the last that was here."

"Yes; we change beats occasionally," was the careless answer. John Steele sprang from his bed and crept very softly toward the hall. "A new man"—He heard them talking again after a few minutes. He remained listening at his door, now slightly ajar.

"There must be a leak somewhere from the quantity you've burned. I'll have a look around; might save your master a few shillings."

John Steele locked his door. The "meter man" crossed the upper hall and stepped, one after the other, into his belongings. What then? Had Jocelyn Wray ordered them sent on with Captain Forsythe's boxes and bags in order that they might be less likely to fall into the hands of the police?

"THERE—THERE MAY BE A SAFER WAY! WAIT!" SHE EXCLAIMED.

"Here you are, sir." The servant had entered and re-entered, had set the table without the man in the armchair being conscious of his coming and going. "Remembered my master inviting you once when you were here to pitch your camp at Rosemary Villa any time you should be after yearning for that quietude essential for literary composition and to wind up the campaign on your book. So when I saw your luggage—"

"Exactly." It was curious the man should have spoken thus, should have voiced one of the very subterfuges Steele had had in mind himself to utter to show pretext for his too abrupt appearance. But now—

As he ate mechanically, but with the zest of one who had long fasted, John Steele listened; again a vehicle went by; then another.

John Steele rose with an effort. No, there was nothing more he required except rest! Which room would he prefer, he was asked when he found himself on the upper landing. The man had put his things in a front chamber, but the back one was larger John Steele forced himself to consider. He even inspected both of the rooms. That on the front floor had one window facing the row; the second chamber looked out over a rear wall separating the vegetable garden of Rosemary Villa from the shrub adorned confines of a place which fronted on the next street. The visitor decided on the former chamber. He carefully closed the blinds and drew across the window the dark, heavy curtains. This would answer very well. Excellent accommodations for a man whose own chambers in the city were now in the hands of renovators—the painters, the paperhangers, the plumbers. And the back room? He paused as if the several rooms. Having apparently made there the necessary examination, he walked over and tried the door of John Steele's room.

"This room's occupied by a visitor," interposed the servant, "and he's asleep now. He wouldn't thank you for the disturbing of his repose."

"All right, I'll not wake him. Don't find the leak I was looking for. Will drop in again."

John Steele, pushing back the blinds a little, looked out of his room. The man who had reached the front of the place glanced back. His gaze at that instant, meeting the other's, seemed to betray a momentary eagerness. Quickly Steele turned away. No doubt now lingered in his mind as to the purpose of the visit.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Are You Nervous?

What makes you nervous? It is the weakness of your womanly constitution, which cannot stand the strain of the hard work you do. As a result, you break down, and ruin your entire nervous system. Don't keep this up! Take Cardui, the woman's tonic. Cardui is made from purely vegetable ingredients. It acts gently on the womanly organs, and helps them to do their proper work. It relieves pain and restores health, in a natural manner, by going to the source of the trouble and building up the bodily strength.

TAKE CARDUI The Woman's Tonic

Mrs. Grace Fortner, of Man, W. Va., took Cardui. This is what she says about it: "I was so weak and nervous, I could not bear to have anyone near me. I had fainting spells, and I lost flesh every day. The first dose of Cardui helped me. Now, I am entirely cured of the fainting spells, and I cannot say enough for Cardui, for I know it saved my life." It is the best tonic for women.

Do you suffer from any of the pains peculiar to women? Take Cardui. It will help you. Ask your druggist.

Of This County.

The Champaigne, (Ill.) Daily News has the following to say regarding the death of William Luyster who was born and raised in Driftwood township in this county, and whose death was mentioned in the Republican Thursday.

William Luyster, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Luyster, of Urbana, died at St. Elizabeth's hospital, Danville, this morning at 7:30 of injuries received in an accident at Villa Grove a few days ago. While it was known that he was pretty badly injured about the head by the breaking of a push pole he was using to set a car on a siding, it was not realized until Thursday the seriousness of his case. When the swelling went down it was found that the sides of his head were crushed in. He was conscious most of the time until his death.

Mr. Luyster was 28 years old and was born in Indiana. He married Miss Belva Hoy of Urbana a few years ago and to that union four children survive. He was employed for a time as brakeman on the Peoria and Eastern, but for some time he had been working in a similar capacity on the C. & E. I. road.

It is understood that the body will be brought to Urbana for burial and the funeral arrangements will be announced on Saturday.

The funeral services were held at the home of his father at East Elm street at two o'clock Monday afternoon. Rev. W. O. Hornbaker was in charge. The funeral party took a special car to Mr. Olive cemetery, where the interment took place.

In line with the campaign begun on the I. C. & S. a short time ago for general safety and better efficiency along the line a local committee was organized at Greenwood this week. General Manager Shane and other officials were present at the meeting and explained the objects of the movement. Mr. Shane in his railroad experience has found that some of the best ideas in railroading come from employees and a box will be placed at the Greenwood shops and into it employees will be invited to drop complaints, plans and suggestions for improvements in the system and for better efficiency.

Meetings for local organization will be held at Seymour, Columbus and other points along the line soon.

The Unseen Bridge

There is a bridge whereof the span is rooted in the heart of man And reaches, without pile or rod, Unto the great white throne of God. Its traffic is in human sighs Fervently waited for the skies 'Tis the only pathway from Despair And it is called the bridge of prayer. —Pall Mall Gazette.

That is the kind we always supply to our patrons, and that is the only kind that any person—young or old—should wear. Any other sort of glasses will surely result in injury to the sight. WITH THE ARRIVAL OF SPRING everybody in the building trades gets busy.
